

The manuscript I have submitted was created using LibreOffice Writer rather than Microsoft Word, so the .docx format displays slightly differently to the .odt format I used to write it. I have included in the "Additional File for Review but Not for Publication" category both the original .odt file and a .pdf based on that .odt, and the .pdf is the one which is guaranteed to display as intended. I have also included various .ttf font-files which I have used for OCS or Old Russian text, as well as Bookerly font which is used to properly display latin characters with unusual combinations of diacritics.
